General Grant is a full-fledged candidate for the nomination for the presidency, and he will be nominated without question. The Republican party dare not nominate anyone else. It never had but two men it could elect to that office, and they were Lincoln and Grant. It counted Hayes in, but it did not elect him. Lincoln is dead, and if Grant should happen to turn his toes up to the cactus while junketing in Mexico, the great Republican party would be gone glimmering. Henry Ward Beecher, and he is a politician for you, thinks it a foolish idea that a man cannot be elected to an office for the third, fourth, fifth, or more terms, if he is a good officer. He is a supporter of Grant just to show the world his contempt for the doctrine of no more than two presidential terms for any man. It is just as sensible as saying that no other man than Grant has sufficient capacity for the office. There are thousands of men in the United States that would make better presidents than Grant has made or will make. No one but a male will deny this proposition. Then why elect Grant for a third term? He was not an extraordinary president for two terms, and is not likely to be better for a third term. He has had all the honorable offices that he is entitled to for the services he rendered. He prefers private life or else he is as great a liar as Andy Johnson asserted he was, for on retiring he left time from the presidential office he had private life with delight and said he would never leave it. No great necessity exists for re-electing him; he likes private life; he is no good president; he has had all the offices he deserved; he is a greater man now than he will ever be again; he is nominated, and no good reason exists for asking him a president for the third term.

Mrs. E. H. Green, who lives a retired life at Bellows Falls, Vermont, is said to be worth $25,000,000. She inherited great wealth from her father, the same "Blubber" Robinson who, in the days of whaling, coined money out of his whaling ships, which were all painted blue and known as the "Blue Line." Fortunate investment, after the death of her father, many years ago, aided thousands upon thousands of dollars to Mrs. Green's store. Her husband lives in New York, but she devotes herself to an invalid son, and being somewhat penurious, to her securities.

Guess congress will make the necessary appropriation to continue the Star Mail service on its present basis. The order of the postmaster general is too sweeping, and congressmen fear the failure of an appropriation would raise such a din that the most of them might never get back to the public trough again.

W. B. Morley denies that there are any restraints put upon the railroad company by the State of Sonora as regards the number of men who can be taken there to construct the road. The contract is with the federal government of Mexico and the company can send all the men they need to construct the road.

When a man receives merited punishment for crime by the skin of his teeth, his first impulse is to lecture. O, for the good old days when Horace Greeley, Bayard Taylor and their peers monopolized the lecture platform.

Ex-Senator B. Gratz Brown writes to the Kansas City Times that he regards the coming struggle as one of life or death to free government in this country. He urges that the Democrats may attain perfect harmony by nominating Seymour and Hendricks.

A Washington dispatch says the House Territorial committee agreed to report favorably a bill prohibiting the settlement of any more Indians in the Indian Territory without the consent of congress.

SANTA FE.

The District Court wrestling with the attorney generalship—Wall robbers on trial—General and personal notes.

SANTA FE, Feb. 23.—This correspondent has finally determined to say no more about the mails.

The District Court is in Session again. The Grand Jury was empaneled and set to work. It is composed of the same men who were on it before with one exception. The greater part of the day was taken up in discussing the attorney generalship. Judge Waldo made an argument from a Montana case that the office was absolutely vacant.

Mr. Fiske made quite a lengthy argument based on decided cases to show that Judge Waldo could not hold over, and that the Governor in the discharge of the duty devolved on him to see the laws executed had a right to appoint, and that the right was confirmed by the statutes of the territory. He also showed from the territorial statutes that the court not appoint any one to discharge all the duties of the attorney general even in the absence of that official, and there could not be such an absence as the law contemplated if there was a vacancy.

Mr. Catron argued that Judge Waldo held over until a successor was confirmed; under the general rules of law.

Other members of the bar argued the case as friends of the Court and Judge Waldo closed with the distinct claim that he is the attorney general, and that there is no vacancy, and cited authorities in point.

The Court withheld a decision and the case of the stage robbers was called. They are Webb, Pierce Cady and I have lost the other and came into court with fetters on. They do not appear at all downcast and spoke cheerfully to men they knew, on the street.

Among the attorneys in attendance are Messrs Hubbell, Sulzbacher and Watson of Las Vegas. Mr. Watson is retained in the cases of the wholesale liquor dealers arrested for violating the internal revenue law. It appears as I understand that Messrs. Browne & Manzanarez, Otero Seller & Co. and others are in default, technically. The law requires a report to be made to the collector by the tenth of the month. These firms had their reports made out and mailed within the ten days but did not reach Collector till after that time. I believe Messrs Hubbell and Sulzbacher both have some of that kind of cases to defend.

Senator Chaves is in attendance on the Court, and Senator Jaramillo of Rio Arriba is here on private business.

The New Mexican calls me a nervous writer or something equally pretty, and all because I do not think the last House, (the last of its kind) was composed largely of great law makers, and also because I think that a man should not be appointed to a place the duties of which he is utterly incompetent to discharge. All that I have to say of the legislature is that every statement I have made is founded on recorded facts.

I count the above of the New Mexican the best possible certificate of my honesty, capacity, and efficiency as a correspondent and of my good standing as a man in this community.

Mr. R. H. Tompkins, appointed and confirmed as librarian has not yet entered on the discharge of the duties of the office and it is not certain that he will do so.

Juan De'gado, the new treasurer, is to qualify and take charge of the office at once.

Your old friend Major Jose D. Sena as sheriff of the County is ex-officio next in rank to the United States marshal and in his absence discharges many of the duties of the office. Deputy Sheriff Conklin is an efficient and obliging assistant. Of course the major is the official interpreter of the court.

The streets are quite muddy to-day.

my first experience, of mud in New Mexico.

The weather is soft and mild as April days in the States.

I interviewed two men to-day who are perfectly familiar with the country in which the Indian war is going on and they are both of the opinion that a party of men, who know the country as the Indians do, can baffle ten times their number.

Chicago, February 21.—The News special from Washington says General O. H. Boynton, in a letter to the Post, states that the facts upon which his review of General Sherman's memoirs was based were furnished him by General Grant, through his then Private Secretary, General O. E. Babcock. The review, based upon these facts, vindicated General Grant's record in points where General Sherman had done him injustice. Recently General Grant had taken to praising the memoirs and maligning the review, and consequently reflecting on the reviewer. In view of this state of affairs General Boynton announces the source from which his information was derived in order to vindicate himself.

St. Louis as a Manufacturing Center.

THE PITTSBURGH OF THE WEST.

(From the Globe-Democrat Jan. 17th, 1880.)
The facilities possessed by our city for the development of the iron industry are well known, and need not be repeated as the place of numerous iron works which nightly illuminate the skies fully attest. But another important industry of which Pittsburgh will recently hold almost undisputed sway, has steadily but steadily grown up in our midst. We mean the manufacture of glass and glassware, which bids fair to rival Pittsburgh.

The Mississippi and Lindell Glass Companies of this city have constantly added new facilities to their already extensive works, and the glass of the West and South is now supplied by St. Louis. In consequence of the large local bottling establishment in America being located here, the manufacture of beer bottles is one of the most important of the glassworks. We have no conception of the enormous quantity of the beer bottles being made and filled in our city, chiefly for shipping and export, until being informed that the ANHEUSER & BUSCH Brewery had during the preceding year, that their demand was still increasing notwithstanding the immense numbers of old bottles returned to them, their contract with the two companies for the coming year being for the delivery of ten million bottles. We were told that ANHEUSER & BUSCH stand today, not only the largest bottlers in America but probably in the world, as no bottling concern in St. Louis has used and filled an equal number of bottles. This is indeed a flattering news giving proof of St. Louis' rapid rise and energy.

The Mississippi and Lindell Glass Companies are making extensive preparations for the manufacture of all kinds of glass jars, in anticipation of a full fruit crop, last year's crop having been a failure.

With the rapid settlement of the West and the reorganization of the South, the glass works of St. Louis will take a prominent place among the manufacturing cities, and not only rival Pittsburgh, but will take the palm and the lead in this branch of industry.

The Manufacture of Railroad Cars in St. Louis.

WESTWARD THE STAR OF EMPIRE TAKES ITS PLACE.

(From the Globe-Democrat, Jan. 4th, 1880.)
We had occasion to visit the shops of the Missouri Car and Foundry Company, and were indeed astonished at the remarkable activity prevailing in every department.

As is well known, most all transportation lines were caught unawares by the sudden business boom and general revival of trade, and were short of rolling stock to haul the immense amount of freight offering from all sides. The result was a great and sudden demand for new cars, and to supply this want the Missouri Car and Foundry Company are kept running day and night, turning out new cars with the rapidity illustrative of American enterprise and energy.

Among the orders on the books of the company we noticed one from the well-known brewers, ANHEUSER & BUSCH for 100 new refrigerator cars of an improved pattern, devised by the brewing firm, and the result of their long and varied experience with refrigerating cars.

It is claimed by Anheuser & Busch that their new cars will carry their celebrated beer to Eastern and Western cities without change of temperature, and the beer will be unloaded at New York and Boston just as cool and fresh as when drawn from their casks and be served to their patrons in those distant cities as sparkling and foaming as the beer handed daily over the counters at Tony Faust's, the well-known resort of all lovers of the bottle beverage, and the celebrated headquarters of this brewery in our town.

Mark one more for the industry and manufacturing enterprise of St. Louis.
